Why I Go To Church

by Dr. R. Glen Miles

Matthew 8 presents three examples of Jesus' inclusive love. The first tells of the healing of a leper, the second tells the story of the slave of a Roman military officer being healed, and the third is the healing of Peter's mother.

There is a problem here: We have lost the ability to be shocked by Jesus' actions. We read about Jesus healing a leper and we think, "That is nice. The poor leper must have been really sick." What did Jesus do though? He touched him. When he did that he broke the law. He went to an outsider and blessed him, healed him, included him in the family of God.

Later, Jesus heals Peter's mother-in-law. Again, he is reaching out to the margins of society. Women were second class citizens. Often they were treated as property. If a man did not like his wife he could divorce her by sending her a note and she would be left to fend for herself. Her options? Slavery, prostitution or death. Jesus ignores conventional thinking and treats the woman as an equal.

Then Jesus heals the slave of an officer in the occupying army. This man is an enemy of Israel. This man is part of an army that has brutally murdered thousands and thousands of Israelites. He may not have participated himself but he is wearing the uniform of those who have.

What in the world is Jesus doing? How can he help this enemy, this officer in the occupying army? This ought to shock us. It ought to make us sit up and at least ask, "What is going on here?"

These stories remind us that Jesus came to break down the barriers that divide. This story of Jesus is one that seeks to guide us toward the Kingdom of God and the way God wants us to live in that Kingdom. In God's Kingdom we develop the ability to look at another human being and see that they are every bit as much a child of God as you and I are. In God's world we learn the ability to look at a Buddhist or a Hindu or a Muslim or even a Baptist and recognize that they too are a part of the family of God.

This is why I go to church. I attend worship every week to remind myself that Jesus' view, that God's view of the world is much broader and wider than mine. When we gather to worship God we are reminding ourselves of how God defines reality. In worship we are reminded of the wideness and the broadness of God's mercy and God's grace and God's far reaching boundless love.

Grace and peace to you, Glen

2011 General Assembly – Tell It!

The theme of the 2011 General Assembly of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) comes from Moses' cautionary sermon to the Hebrew people before they enter the Promised Land. This land flows with milk and honey, but bounty clouds identity. Pay attention! Do not to trust your memory. Post reminders. Repeat this command so that even unborn generations inherit it. In short: "Tell it!"

The theme is based on Deuteronomy 6: 1-12. "Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God is one LORD; and you shall love the LORD your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your might."

The general assembly will be July 9-13 in Nashville, TN. Information and registration materials are available at www.disciples.org/ga. Save by registering before April 1.

Burned Biscuits

by Lisa McCleish, Director of Early Childhood Programs

I received an email story recently entitled Burned Biscuits. The story, written by a now adult, remembered a dinner his mom had served which included “extremely burned” biscuits. The boy was amazed that his dad ate the biscuits and even told his wife that he loved burned biscuits every now and then as she apologized to him for burning the dinner.

As the child was getting ready for bed, he questioned whether or not his dad really liked burned biscuits. The boy’s dad replied, “Your momma put in a hard day at work today and she is tired. A little burned biscuit never hurt anyone.” The story went on to tell what a meaningful lesson that was for this boy as he grew older.

A statement I often use with the staff is, “There are 21 other personalities that work here” (referring to the Parents’ Day Out and Preschool staff), or as we talk about the children, “You have eight individual children in this room who all want it done their way.” This is frequently the precursor to sorting through differing opinions or discussing differences in people.

Our program – our world – is full of different personalities, different ideas and different people. In our jobs and our lives, we can accept these differences or we can fight them. But as the author of the story said, “...choosing to celebrate each others’ differences is one of the most important keys to creating healthy, growing and lasting relationships.”

The conversation with the staff usually evolves to a realization that the other person was not wrong, she just had a different opinion or way of doing something. Frequently one of us will start remembering and listing our own imperfections: impatience...forgetfulness...lack of understanding...

So today, I pray for understanding and acceptance. Please pass the biscuits.

Pillow Cases Needed for Sewing Group

The church’s Sewing Group has run out of pillowcases to make the popular girls dresses that our mission teams have taken to South Africa and Nicaragua. If you have pillow cases in good condition that you can donate, please bring them to Lauren Weinhold’s office (Rm. 107).

Parents of Teenagers

Sun., Mar. 27, 6:00-8:00 p.m.

Join other parents of teens and almost teens as we gather for conversation and support. The topic this month is Alcohol Use and Abuse: Sending the Right Message to Your Kids. Many teens don't see alcohol as a problem substance like other illegal drugs since it is woven into the fabric of our culture. Teens may see bottles of wine at home, watch beer commercials during the Super Bowl, flip through an enticing drink menu at a restaurant, or hear stories of weekend parties at school. It's not surprising that many want to try it for themselves. It's new and risky but socially acceptable. Come and join in the discussion as we explore this challenge that all teens (and their parents) will face. Refreshments served, location to be announced.

Walk with Humility

by Rev. Carla Aday, Senior Associate Minister

I cannot get the image of this man's feet out of my mind. Dusty. Scarred. Misshapen. Wrapped around his 60-year old gnarled feet and laced through his crusty toes were leather strings. Underneath his soles a piece of scrap rubber too small to protect his feet from the raw earth. Homemade sandals for sure.

He had come to the mountaintop clinic in rural Nicaragua with his wife. Her condition was dire and demanded immediate attention. They had gentle faces. Sweet. Tender. But their feet told a story of hard living.

As our translator explained the doctor's medical advice, I noticed the husband's feet. I pondered how I could offer him a pair of shoes without insulting him. I didn't want to injure his pride or damage his dignity. "I'm concerned that you might develop an infection in your feet," I said hesitantly. "And I'm wondering if you might like a pair of shoes that could better protect your feet." I hoped my translator would make my offer sound dignified and gracious.

The elderly man laughed and told a long story about how when he was a boy his mother tried to make him wear better shoes but he never did want to wear them. Then the translator told me, "He is saying he would be happy to have a pair of shoes that he could wear for dress up occasions."

The next day, a member of our team went shoe shopping in the town 1½ hours away by bus. Using money donated by church members through the Collection Connection, she bought him a pair of black lace-up dress shoes, a pair of flip flops, and a pair of cros. The total bill was $33. Those will no doubt be the last shoes the man ever owns.

I come home to my bedroom and see the shoes strewn across the floor – black, brown, flats, heels, boots, tennis shoes. Old, new. All leather. And I realize they are more than fashion statements. They protect my feet from injury and pain. Mine were made in a factory and not by my own hands at home.

I remembered a line I read recently, "You cannot make a gift of something that justice demands a person should already have." This man in Nicaragua without adequate footwear has reminded me how to walk. With humility. The memory of his humble feet reminds me of Jesus who is "the way, the truth and the life." Let us walk that way together.

Carla
